Sydney R. Hargro

Executive Director

Community Foundation of South Jersey

In recent years, new legal organizational structures have emerged that are designed to impact the world through business. Various state legislatures across the nation have either enacted or are considering laws that create these entities which uniquely integrate for-profit and nonprofit values.

The Low-profit Limited Liability company (L3C) and the Benefit corporation (B-Corp) are hybrid entities that offer new means of accomplishing social impact and therefore new opportunity for charitable investment. In this presentation, Sidney Hargro will compare these choices, contrast them to conventional charity-focused approaches and discuss key considerations for philanthropic investment.

Sidney Hargro is the Executive Director of the newly created Community Foundation of South Jersey, one of the newest community foundations in the United States and the first one to serve the southern eight counties of New Jersey. He leads the foundation's effort to advance lifetime and legacy giving and offer visionary community leadership.
