The Jay A. Strassberg Memorial Scholarship is awarded annually by the Camden County Bar Foundation to a Rutgers-Camden School of Law student or Temple University undergraduate who is a student in the Journalism, Public Relations, and Advertising Department of the School of Communications and Theater Arts, who demonstrates both financial need and academic achievement. Preference will be given to candidates from Camden County or the South Jersey area.

The Scholarship honors Jay A. Strassberg, a 1961 Communications graduate of Temple University, who served as the Executive Director of the Camden County Bar Association from 1974 to 1998. In addition to his successful career with the Camden County Bar, Mr. Strassberg also worked for Temple University in its public relations department, as an editor and news reporter for KYW Radio, and as Executive Director of the Philadelphia Bar Association.

An award of at least $1,000 will be given to the selected recipient.

The criteria for the Jay A. Strassberg Memorial Scholarship are as follows:

- Completed application;
- A brief letter from the applicant detailing his or her personal and educational background, work history (if any), course of study, and plans after graduation;
- A current transcript of law school courses including grade point average;
- A letter of recommendation submitted by a faculty member of the school of law;
- A disclosure of financial information revealing all sources of funding being received or being offered to the applicant (include other scholarships, financial awards or other financial assistance).

Application materials should be mailed to:
